For two decades, CAQH has brought stakeholders together to streamline the business of healthcare. We do this by delivering advanced member and provider data solutions that eliminate redundant and inefficient processes; conducting industry research to identify opportunities to improve workflows through CAQH Insights; and by developing operating rules that accelerate automation and streamline healthcare administration through CAQH CORE.

CORE Participants today include more than 100 health systems, vendors, government agencies, standard-setting bodies and health plans working together to make the healthcare system more interconnected, interoperable and efficient.

Operating Rules

CORE is leading the development of business rules that make electronic data transactions more predictable and consistent, regardless of the technology. The Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services designated CORE as the author for federally mandated operating rules under the the HIPAA Administrative Simplification provisions.

Certification

CORE Certification demonstrates that an organization's IT systems or products conform with industry operating rules. This gives potential trading partners confidence in its ability to connect and exchange information securely.

Thought Leadership

CORE is informing the national dialogue on interoperability, health IT and digital transformation. CORE experts testify before state and federal policy setting bodies and speak before industry audiences, with insights and published materials widely cited across industry publications.
